

WISCONSIN WOMEN'S STATE GOLF ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL RECORD BOOK

Updated January 2020

BRIEF HISTORY

On August 24, 1909, twenty-five women representing five golf clubs (Sheboygan CC, Algoma CC, Milwaukee CC, Bluemound CC and Woodmont CC), met at Algoma Country Club in Oshkosh, for a “golf rally” which would be the most significant single event in the history of Wisconsin women’s golf. Sandwiched somewhere between the matches, a meeting was held with the help of the Western Golf Association, and the Wisconsin Women’s Golf Association was formed to promote the game of golf among women in the state. An indeed, starting with that first event, the WWGA very successfully took on the important role of providing golf opportunities and tournaments, attracting large numbers of women golfers from private clubs throughout the state. In April of 1983, the name was officially changed to the Wisconsin Women’s State Golf Association.

The game of golf attracted more women on public golf courses as well. Public Links women had no other venues in which to play except for tournaments on their own courses. So in 1961, two public links women golfers contacted other clubs and by July of 1962, had organized 14 charter clubs into the Wisconsin Women’s Public Links Golf Association (WWPLGA). Their first official tournament was at Brown Deer Park Golf Course. Early membership was limited to member clubs and later expanded to individual memberships for those in the work force.

While originally each organization served a specific group of golfers, as time went on, it became apparent that both Associations shared identical goals of encouraging and promoting the game of golf among women in Wisconsin, in addition to providing support to younger golfers. The leadership of both organizations began to foster interaction among all golfers and encouraged inclusion in tournaments. Starting in 2002, a regular series of meetings began with members from both Associations forming a committee to lay the groundwork for a merger. It was a thorough and productive effort, but the differences in membership structure and governance resulted in a mutual agreement to temporarily suspend the merger process. It was, however, agreed to have a single State Stroke Play Championship with alternating responsibility by each Association and to also continue co-sponsorship of other events.

The dual tournament efforts continued for several years with no further action. It was the implementation of a computerized state golf registration system, increasing each organizations financial commitment, which brought attention to another important benefit of a merger. In 2011, a WWPLGA member drafted a working paper, outlining new ideas for the structure of a single state organization and circulated it to both Associations for consideration. The paper was the catalyst for the formation of an ad hoc committee charged with establishing a single women’s state golf association.

In 2012, the committee held a series of meetings which resulted in a new set of bylaws with redefined elements of governance and a new membership structure. Taking advantage of the computer age, members of both organizations were kept updated. It was agreed that due to an established tax status, the name of the new organization would remain the Wisconsin Women’s State Golf Association. In the fall of 2012, after thorough dissemination of the bylaws of the new organization, membership of both the WWPLGA and WWSGA voted to become one golf association. The first official board meeting of the NEW Wisconsin Women’s State Golf Association was held November 14, 2012.

The WWSGA held golf tournaments each year, in accordance with USGA rules, for the benefit of its members. Throughout its history, the WWSGA had the support and assistance of the Wisconsin State Golf Association (WSGA). In order to better serve its members and to further promote the game of golf, the WWSGA Board of Directors has voted to formally merge with the WSGA in order to create a single Association for all golfers in Wisconsin. This merger was approved by WWSGA voting members in late 2019, and the legal entity of the WWSGA was dissolved shortly thereafter.

Beginning January 1, 2020, the former Board of Directors of the WWSGA was re-formed into a Committee within the WSGA, charged with the task of organizing and operating golf tournaments for women.

STATE STROKE PLAY CHAMPIONSHIP

1975 – 1982 - A two-day stroke play was held concurrently with the Match Play for those players whose handicaps were too high to qualify for the Match Play.

1983-2004 – The WWSGA 36-Hole Championship began in 1983 as a separate event from the two-day as more women wanted to participate.
